Analytical/performance cookies: these are cookies which allow a website operator to recognise and count the number of visitors and to see how visitors move around a website. They help improve the way websites work, for example, by ensuring that users easily find what they are looking for.

Functionality cookies: these allow a returning user and his/her preferences to be recognised. This means that the website can then present personalised content.

Targeting cookies: these types of cookies record visits to a website, the pages visited and the links followed. These cookies are used to tailor content.

At the moment, we use cookies which are necessary for the performance of our site and to recognise returning users and for analytical performance. We do not use targeting cookies.
